Dawuds Traum by Kader Abdolah

Kader Abdolah

Als Dawoed, een Perzische journalist die in Amsterdam woont, door Zuid-Afrika reist, wordt hij Dawuds Traum getroffen door de schoonheid en de kracht van dat land. Maar Dawoed heeft ook moeite om te genieten van wat hij ziet. Telkens moet hij denken aan vijf van zijn vrienden van wie er drie zijn geëxecuteerd en twee na lange gevangenisstraffen zijn vrijgelaten. Zoals ze Dawuds Traum elkaar vroeger hun belevenissen toevertrouwden, zo vertelt Dawoed zijn vrienden nu elke nacht een deel van zijn reiservaringen

The author, Kader Abdolah is an Iranian author dwelling within the Netherlands. His type jogged my memory on numerous events of Orhan Pamuk. The book's major personality is an Iranian journalist, Dawoed, residing within the Netherlands, now traveling in South Africa. As a result of Dawuds Traum his fight with the Dutch language, he can determine with the Afrikaans audio system of South Africa whereas learning the parallels among this nation and his local Iran. Meanwhile, the story is informed from the point of view of 1 of the Dawoed's associates who died a result of Iranian Dawuds Traum revolution. He, including 4 different (dead) friends, stick to in Dawoed's footsteps and study from his event and rediscover lives they have misplaced by means of studying the rustic themselves. The book's has a flavour of magical realism to it and has very unhappy overtones. Meanwhile, Abdolah's sort is especially clear, basic yet very, very Dawuds Traum moving, whereas refraining from turning into dramatic. The tale offers with major subjects, making for an Dawuds Traum intensely unhappy combination: the great thing about what is round us, if in simple terms you care to seem and the discomfort of understanding so you might now not event all this attractiveness if something since you are by no means a whole grasp Dawuds Traum of your personal destiny. Abdolah mixes Afrikaans poems, Persian poetry right into a modern novel that is gripping, touching and very, very sad.
